GERMANS SINK BRITISH SHIP

Submarine Victory in North Sea

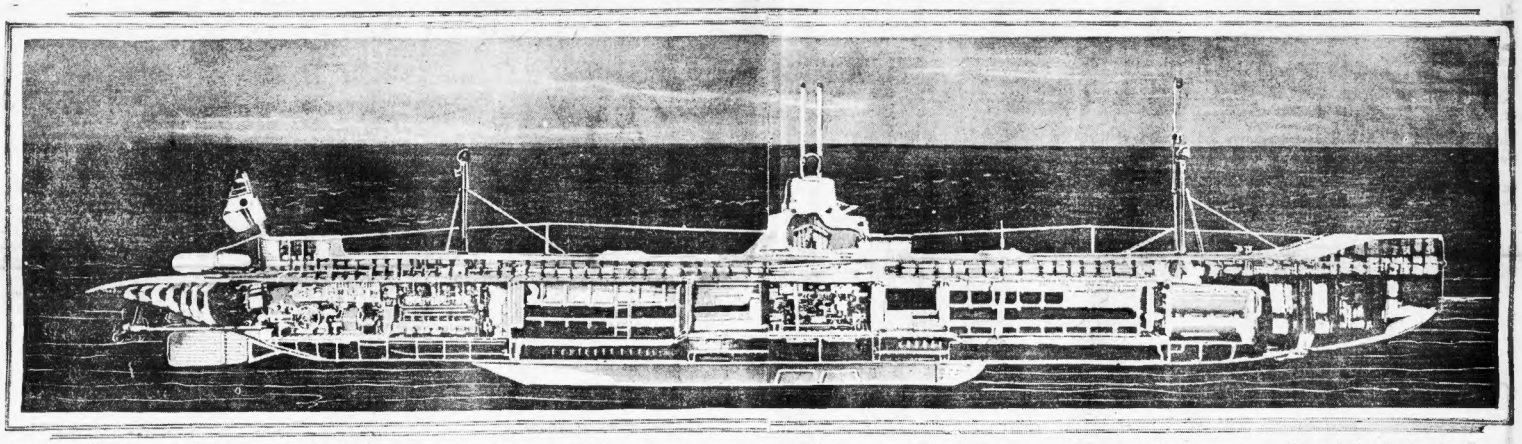
INTERIOR VIEW OF DEADLY GERMAN SUBMARINE



The internal arrangements of a German submarine, such as sank the British cruiser Hawke. In the bow are the torpedo tubes. Then come quarters for the crew. Just below the periscope are arranged the navigating instruments. Toward the stern lie more crew quarters, and in the very stern are the engine rooms with gas engines for surface running and storage batteries for submerged work. The light masts fore and aft are usually taken down before the boat is submerged. The periscope stands up from the centre of the boat. The torpedoes are fired from two, three or four tubes in the bow, pointing straight ahead. The tubes are aimed by pointing the submarine straight toward the ship attacked.

Her Husband's Widow

By EDMUND B. D'AUVERGNE

READ THIS FIRST

Leslie Morne, a beautiful young girl, is governess in an English middle-class family. She is romantic in temperament and has visions of a splendid future. Going for a walk by the sea, she is annoyed by a man she does not know. She is rescued from his attentions by another stranger. Leslie thinks her knight is the handsomest man she has ever seen, and wonders if she has found her Prince Charming at last.

CHAPTER II.

OF course, she met him again. Hastings is not a very great town, and the visitors flock mostly to the same spots. The morning after their first meeting she saw him riding along the front. He rode with an ease and naturalness that contrasted oddly with the self-conscious pose of many of the riders whom he passed. She thought she had never seen so fine, so dashing a cavalier. He saw her, too, raised his cap, and smiled, and shot a swift, curious glance at the three children with her. She bowed, blushed deeply, and heartily wished that she had sent her charges down to the beach. Harry, the eldest, plied her with questions. "Who was that swell? How had she got to know him? Perhaps he might give him a ride on his horse?" She told the boy to mind his own business, and so incurred his sulky resentment the rest of the day.

That night she went down again on to the esplanade, moved by that curious superstition common to many of us that where something pleasant has happened to us it may happen again. And, sure enough, he came strolling along with a fox terrier at his heels.

Both expressed their surprise at meeting the other. "You don't mind me speaking to you again, I hope?" he asked, searching her face anxiously.

"Why should I? You have earned the right to speak to me, I should think. I rather wondered whether you cared to."

She spoke about his dog, about whose merits he was enthusiastic, and from the dog passed to admiring the horse.

"It's not a bad horse," he agreed, thoughtfully, "though I've ridden better."

Then he asked abruptly, "Were those boys your brothers?"

"I'm a governess," she said, shortly, and glanced at him keenly.

"A governess, eh? I suppose you know a tremendous lot." His stiffness seemed to relax, but he looked at her with a certain boyish respect.

"Hadn't we better introduce ourselves?" she said, turning on him with a bright smile. "My name is Leslie Morne."

"Mine is Steele—Victor Steele."

She liked the name—it seemed to fit the personality. He added no sort of description of himself. Probably he had no profession.

"It's awfully nice to meet anyone I can really talk to down here," she ventured nervously.

They made an appointment for the next afternoon. She could not sleep

IS HARVARD KOPAENEK VICTIM?

By A HARVARD GRADUATE.

Is it possible that the matter of Professor Munsterberg is merely another "Kopaenek" joke?

Every one recalls the German cobbler, whose sense of humor was so keen that he promoted himself rapidly to be a general of the army and made the bluff good to an astonishing extent.

Cobbler Kopaenek convulsed even the matter-of-fact Teutons with his escapade. He went from his native city to a country district. He donned his uniform, gold braid, epaulets, sword and other accessories of high rank.

Then he sallied forth and enjoyed his self-bestowed rank and dignities. He had the worthy burgomaster at his feet. The garrison, if I recall correctly, turned out and saluted. The keys of the city were turned over to him.

The "general" was feted and courted and generally honored, just as a real German general would be in any German town. Also Kopaenek secured a considerable amount of money.

Inevitably the imposition was discovered and things looked very black for Cobbler Kopaenek for a time. He had been guilty of "lese majeste" to a superlative degree. But, while the populace was wandering whether the saucy cobbler would be butted in oil or simply broken on the wheel, the Kaiser let him go with a brief imprisonment, saying that such an audacious and enterprising cobbler was

OPERATORS DENY ALL CHARGES

Telephone operators do "listen in" on the lines sometimes, under instructions. This point was brought out at a hearing given by the Public Service Commission at its quarters, No. 1 Beacon street, today, in answer to complaint of Henry W. Grady of Somerville of inadequate service.

Miss Mary A. Swanson, night chief operator at Somerville exchange, testified that she had listened on Grady's line under orders from her superiors, on account o fcomplaints that Grady had made.

This hearing had been styled in advance the "telephone tango" hearing because Mr. Grady had been quoted in a Boston morning newspaper as saying that the telephone operators spent too much of their leisure time dancing the tango.

The Somerville operators had emphatically resented this reported statement and denied that they tangoed too much.

TANGO FAILS THROUGH.

The "tango" feature fell through at the hearing when Grady, in response to questions by Chairman McLeod of the Public Service Commission, admitted having ever said the operators danced the tango at all. Grady also denied having commented in any manner on the way the operators spend their leisure time.

There were a dozen telephone operators from Somerville among the 150 people present when the hearing began. Grady conducted his own case. The telephone company's witnesses were put on by Attorney McDevitt. Several officials of the com-

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Steam railroads of the United States whose annual revenues exceed $1,000,000 earned during June, 1914, net operating revenues of $70,312,180.44, the Interstate Commerce Commission today reported. The total operating revenues of these roads during June were $244,123,127.31 and total operating expenses $172,810,247.37. During the year ended June, 1914, these roads earned net operating revenues of $836,256,890.75, their total operating revenues were $2,981,391,325.41 and total operating expenses $2,156,-134,734.66.

Fined for Shooting Ducks in City Limits

Charles Vuilleumier paid a $10 fine in South Boston District Court today for shooting two wild ducks off Thompson's Island, but in the city limits. "Pretty dear ducks—$10 a pair," said Charles, when the birds were handed back to him, after having been used as evidence to convict him. The complaint was made by Superintendent Charles H. Bradley of Thompson's Island, who is a special officer. He saw Charles shooting in a rowboat, 500 feet off the island. He put out in a motor boat and arrested the duck-hunter.

CRUISER HAWKE LOST; HUNDREDS IN CREW DIE

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The British cruiser Hawke has been sunk in the North Sea by a German submarine in another daring raid from the German coast. The news of this latest German naval triumph was given out by the Admiralty today.

The Hawke was a war craft of 7,350 tons and her ordinary complement was 544 men. She was 360 feet long, 60 feet in the beam and was capable of a speed of 19 knots.

The Hawke's armaments consisted of two 9.2-inch (30 calibre) guns in shields; ten 6-inch guns, four in casements and six in shields; twelve 6-pounders; five 3-pounders; two machine guns and two 18-inch torpedo tubes. She was laid down in 1889.

The Germans have again demonstrated the wonderful possibilities of the small but dangerous submarine when pitted against big men-of-war. The German sailors also showed magnificent daring in penetrating the North Sea through the vigilant patrols of the British navy.

Only fifty members of the crew of the Hawke escaped. The Hawke and the Theseus, a sister cruiser of the same class, were on patrol duty when the attack was launched.

The German submarine aimed a torpedo at the Theseus, but the missile missed and the cruiser escaped.

The disaster to the Hawke occurred yesterday. The sinking of the Hawke had evidently occurred far north, as the survivors of that cruiser were landed at Aberdeen in Scotland.

MISS WELCH DEFENDS RIGHT TO FURNITURE

Miss Anna V. Welch, who has been enjoined by her father, Thomas J. Welch, from removing furniture and other household effects from their apartment at No. 13 Folsom street, Dorchester, denied that she had ever threatened to "take out all the furniture and leave him in a bare house."

Mr. Welch says his daughter seeks to remove the furniture so she can spend her mother willed it to her. He says her mother never owned the furniture, but that it was bought and paid for by him.

Miss Welch replies that her father has ordered her out of the house, and that the furniture is hers.

Malachi L. Jennings, ballet law commissioner, married a daughter of Mr. Welch.

Miss Anna V. Welch said:

WAS WILLED PROPERTY.

"I emphatically deny the story in the morning papers relative to my threatening attitude toward my father. The furniture is mine. I can prove it by my mother's will. That will is in the hands of Attorney Arthur Johnson.

"The whole matter is one of spite and jealousy. My other sisters were left $500 each in cash at the time of mother's death. The rest of the estate was left to me. That caused the row. It's too bad. I think the world of my father, always did and always will. I have been his constant companion.

"I was ordered from the house. I could have taken the furniture, but I just would not. I would not think of leaving my father in bare rooms, as the papers say.

FOUR AGAINST ONE.

"I know what I'm doing. It's hard for me because it's four against one. I am right, nevertheless, and I can prove it.

Mrs. Clarke, housekeeper for Mr Welch for a year, said:

"Ever since the death of Mrs. Welch there has been trouble over the estate. Miss Anna claims that the furniture belongs to her. To my best knowledge it was bought by Mr. Welch with his own earnings. He told me so and always insisted that it was true.

"Mr. Welch is seventy-eight years old. He has been an employe for fifty-eight years of the Boston Gas Works in the North End. I claim that the furniture is his and Miss Anna claims that it is hers, so there you are."

Welch's daughters are Anna, Mrs. Gertrude W. Jennings, Mrs. Grace Beibler, Mrs. Helen Biggins and Mrs. Sarah Taft.

Harrison Urges Additional Tax

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 16.—General Francis Burton Harrison opened the session of the Legislature today by declaring that the present disturbed financial situation required all persons to observe rigid economy and urged that new sources of taxation be found for the relief of the government. "Philippine taxation now is so low that the government justly can impose an additional levy," said Harrison.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—ADVERTISEMENT.

700 POUNDS OF BULLETS ARE STOLEN

Seven hundred pounds of high powered rifle cartridges were stolen from a freight car in Charlestown. Police of the City Square station have recovered forty or fifty pounds, from among the school children of that district, it became known today. A number of boys will appear before Judge Donovan in the district court tomorrow to tell what they know about it.

The police state that the danger is now past, but that on last Sunday afternoon, children were playing the cartridges of a high powered calibre, on the car tracks, so that the passage of the cars exploded them. Boys threw forty-five calibre cartridges against stone walls and got explosions as a result.

Forty-five, thirty-two and twenty-two calibre cartridges were laid out in long rows on car tracks along Bunker Hill and Main streets last Sunday and during the early week, with the result that the passage of the cars over the explosive sounded like the action of machine guns.

Just who broke into the freight car last Saturday and took the vast amount of cartridges, which was assigned to the United States Government at the Charlestown Navy Yard, has not yet been learned by the police.

CANAL CLEAR IN WEEK, SAYS COL. GOETHALS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Traffic on the Panama Canal, stopped by the slide in Culebra cut will be resumed in about a week, it was announced today by Major Boggs, chief of the Panama Canal office, following the receipt of a cablegram from Colonel Goethals, telling of the slide.

The cablegram read: "Slide occurred on east side of caral, north of Goldhill, at 5 o'clock last evening (Wednesday). 1,500 feet long, completely blocking channel for 1,000 feet in length. Dredges were moved to the north of this when slide began and are now operating to open up channel for passage of boats unless further movement occurs. Expect to have channel open in one week."

PHONE GIRLS DENY CHARGES AT HEARING

Pany were present. Many spectators were on hand, drawn by the report that a lot of "tango testimony" would be heard.

Grady recited a list of complaints he declared the service inadequate. He alleged, among other things, that when he called Belmont he often got no answer, and when he did get him on the telephone, when out of town, he accused operators of listening.

FORMER OPERATOR.

Grady was formerly a telephone operator on the night relief in Somerville. Describing the "listening in" Grady said:

"On June 14 last I got a call from a Belmont operator. Some one listened in on the line. The Belmont operator said: 'Some one is listening in on the line. You must get after them.'

"I complained to the Somerville chief operator. She said: 'I will listen on the line all I want to. It is the company's orders for me to listen on this line during a stated period. The line is under special observation on account of the number of complaints you have made.'

"On account of the Belmont operator telling me someone was listening she got in bad with the company and received such a raking over the coals that she hasn't spoken to me since."

Chairman McLeod: "Why should she vent her displeasure on you, instead of on the Somerville exchange?"

While spectators laughed, Grady replied: "I give it up."

WATCHED HIS LINE.

Miss Mary A. Swanson, the Somerville night chief operator, said:

"We had been having so many complaints from Mr. Grady that District Chief Cameron orders,' Mr. Grady's line under 'special observation.' A special bell was installed on my desk which would ring whenever Mr. Grady received a call. I was instructed to listen for a period of five minutes to the telephone conversation, with a view to determine if Mr. Grady's service was entire satisfactory. After that Belmont incident he was very indignant and protested."

Miss Swanson said there is no lack of operators at the exchange, that none of them are idlers, and that ll calls are handled properly and promptly.

U. S. MAY CLOSE MARCONI WIRE AT HONOLULU

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt today directed that the Marconi wireless station at Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, be closed within twenty-four hours, unless satisfactory explanation for an alleged breach of neutrality is given by the Marconi Company.

The Navy Department today received a dispatch from Rear Admiral Moore, commandant of the naval station at Hawaii, that immediately after the arrival at Honolulu of the German gunboat Geier and during the temporary absence of the naval censor, the Marconi Wireless Company sent a wireless message announcing the arrival of the Geier.

Inasmuch as this action constituted a violation of neutrality, as it gave positive information of the operation and position of a belligerent ship, Acting Secretary Roosevelt directed Admiral Moore to demand an immediate explanation of this action from the Marconi Company. In case a satisfactory explanation is not received within twenty-four hours Admiral Moore was directed to close the radio station without further orders.

The forty-seven-day drouth which has turned all New England into tinder ended today, so far as Boston was concerned, with a steady drizzle. Before this only .21 of an inch of rain had fallen for a month and a half.

This is the worst drouth in the history of the local weather bureau. In April, 1844, only .28 of rain fell, but that was for a month only, while this is for a month and a half. The amount of rainfall is practically the same.

The prediction today is "rain and cooler tonight and Saturday. Moderate easterly winds."

Trimmed Dress Hats $10

Elsewhere $18 and $20

We are not going to say one word about the style and quality of our $10 dress hats, because their marvelous beauty and refinements cannot be fully appreciated unless you see them with your own eyes. Exclusive millinery shops have no trouble at all in getting $18 and $20 for such hats as long as their customers do not come to Bacons' and make comparisons. There is a very good reason why our prices are lower than elsewhere and our styles and quality equal in every respect to those of the exclusive shop. Here is the reason and we believe it will be of interest to every woman.

Bacons' is the only store in Boston having an alliance with the largest importers, wholesalers and manufacturers in the United States. Others copy, while we originate. You will find here exclusive models not to be found in any other millinery or department store in Boston. You will also find of Bacons' copies and adaptations of foreign model hats in great variety. Our prices range up to $30 and our hats can only be compared with the millinery selling elsewhere up to $100. Our $10 hats, however, hold the record for popularity. No two hats are alike, so that any woman who comes to Bacons' may rest assured that no other will have a hat exactly like hers. Furthermore there is something about our styles that appeals to the women of fashion, and you will especially appreciate this if you have ever paid $10 or more for a hat and then wished you had your money back.

Two Hundred $7 and $8 Trimmed Hats at $5

Our $7 and $8 trimmed hats at $5 are the style sensation of the season and we will prove it to you instantly if you will come today or Saturday for inspection of the DRESS HATS with OSTRICH TRIMMINGS, the FUR AND FLOWER TRIMMED HATS and the TAILORED HATS in black and the leading shades. # PROFESSOR WIENER LAUDS ELIOT'S STAND

Professor Leo Wiener, head of the department of Slavic languages at Harvard and leading authority in this country on Slavic literature, history and ideals, vigorously endorsed today the statement of Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President-emeritus of Harvard, before the Business Women's Club, that the United States would aid the allies in the European war if necessary.

Professor Wiener said:

"President Eliot struck the keynote of the whole situation in his address before the Business Women's Club last evening. His unmistakable utterances voice the true feeling of all that is best in American life.

"The United States cannot restrain its sympathies in the present crisis and keep its self respect. While I do not look for any actual assistance from the United States in behalf of the allies, I do feel that this country must come out unequivocally and express its true position within the next two months.

"The United States is peculiarly indebted to some of the contestants in the European struggle, and we have always been the foe of injustice and oppression. Hence it is to be expected that we must take the side of those nations which are fighting Germany or else be branded untrue to our whole genesis and tradition as a free people.

EXPECTS U. S. TO SHOW HAND.

"I look to see the United States facing the issue squarely and, while not rendering assistance to the allied nations, throwing its great influence into the balance against the oppressor.

"Congressman Gardner is another plain-spoken man who has declared himself as frankly in sympathy with the allies. For my part, I fail to see how anyone with any feeling or ideals at all can refrain from expressing his sympathies in a time like the present.

"Personally, I am neither a man of war nor a strict peace advocate. When men get sufficiently excited over an issue they will fight. President Wilson is a very level-headed man in this affair, but I do think that he will see the wisdom of Dr. Eliot's position before very long. No wise have passed 'Conquest is sometimes beneficial to a nation—providing the conqueror uses his power to uplift the vanquished people. Hence, I am not especially concerned as to who is victorious in this struggle provided the victor uses his opportunity for the advantage of the subjected nation—as some instances where the United States has had to conquer a rebellious island for its own ultimate good.

"While it is true that I predicted this war along with many other prophets who understood the European situation two years ago, I now hesitate to predict any further for fear of losing my reputation as a prophet. I do not know who will be victor, and I am frank to say so.

"I hope that nation wing which is best able to deal constructively and humanely with its opponents, and, from the present indications, as evidenced in the European struggle, it is not difficult to say which nations I hope will win.

PLANS SEVERAL TALKS.

"I am to speak at the Harvard Club on October 20th, on the subject, 'Russia and the Slavic Ideals,' and at the Algonquin Club on October 22d on 'The Slavic Question, and Some Aspects of the War.' In these two addresses I will enter more completely into the European situation as I see it.

"As for Professor Munsterberg, I cannot discuss that case at present. I only thank Providence that I have no more in common with the Illustrious Mayor Clarence Wiener than to be so unfortunate as to have the same name."

President Eliot in his address said in part:

"We must hope and pray that we will not be drawn in, but that will be due to the fact that Russia and France and England will not need to accomplish the defeat of Germany.

"This is perhaps no time for prophecy. But it is not rash to prophesy that the American people will be true to its quality, its history and its debts to England and to France, from whom we have taken our ideals in such large part and to whom we owe so much.

"All our hopes were shattered by Germany's action. All our American ideas of the right to life, liberty, property, happiness were nullified by this nation, which is led by a ruler who has an archaic idea of his powers and of his relation to the world. Germany has shown us that in the most advanced nation, as far as science is concerned, there's no place for mercy, no place for good will and that hatred takes the place of good nature. The present German philosophy stands on 'might makes right.'"

Search for Missing Somerville Woman

Mrs. Stevens wore a brown hat with a large white feather, a gray coat, black skirt, black shoes and stockings. She weighs 122 pounds, and is five feet, three inches tall.

Her husband says: "I do not believe she went away deliberately, for before going she wrote a postal inviting a South Boston friend to visit her."

Eleven Specialists Gather the Stocks for the Filene Clothes Shops for Misses and Girls

Filene's

Each of these expert buyers has a comparatively small field to cover. One buys misses' suits, one buys dresses, one hats, one coats, one skirts, one underclothes, one waists, and so on.

It is the Filene idea to so specialize that each buyer may know ALL there is to know about his merchandise field. This knowledge should be directly reflected in his merchandise—its style, its quality, its value.

We believe this is the reason why these eleven specialty shops (our entire fourth floor) are becoming (as we intended they should be) more and more the recognized clothes headquarters for girls of six to eighteen years.

Official War Reports.

RUSSIAN.

Russian Coat of Arms

PETROGRAD, Oct. 16.—After having advanced within seven miles of Warsaw the Germans were repulsed and driven back. They are now thirty miles from the city. Heavy firing is going on, with the advantage in our favor.

The fighting was most severe for two days. The Germans were cut in two and retired to a line from Lodz to Petrokrow to Kielce. The Russian troops are advancing steadily and all along the battle line our troops have again taken the offensive, with every advantage in our favor.

The German loss was heavy, many being killed and wounded, and we have taken 10,000 prisoners.

Russian troops are subjecting the Austrian stronghold at Przemysl to a ceaseless bombardment. The incessant fire of our troops is having a demoralizing effect on the Austrian garrison. Many of the Austrians are deserting and arriving daily at the Russian camp.

On Wednesday 30,000 Austrians attempted a sortie from the city. One of the Russian regiments, perceiving the movement, allowed the enemy to approach within easy range and then opened fire upon the Austrians with mitrailleuses. The Austrians were completely annihilated. The reduction of the fortress is only a question of days.

GERMAN.

German Coat of Arms.

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—The Russian attack which had for its objective the invasion of East Prussia has been broken. There is a German army of eight corps before Warsaw.

The Russian attack against the German troops on the Ivangorod-Warsaw line has been repulsed with heavy losses. The claims of the Russian general staff of the capture of German guns are baseless.

Five thousand prisoners were taken when Antwerp was captured. An immense amount of booty fell into our hands.

FRENCH.

French Coat of Arms.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—At our left wing the action of the allies' forces now extends from the region of Ypres to the sea.

In Russia, on the left bank of the Vistula, during the day of October 13, Russian troops repulsed the Germans' attacks directed against Warsaw and Ivangorod. The battle is now going on to the south of Przemysl.

AUSTRIAN.

Austrian Coat of Arms.

VIENNA, Oct. 16.—On the afternoon of Oct. 2, the commander of the fortress at Przemysl received through a messenger bearing a white flag a request to surrender at once "To prevent useless slaughter."

The demand was signed by General Dimitrieff, the Bulgarian general, who is leading the Russian army that moved against Przemysl.

The commandant of the fortress refused to dignify the demand with a lengthy reply. He rejected it with a short message. The fortified heights of Starazol, in Galicia, have been occupied.

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

A-K Tablets for Various Forms of Headache

"It is necessary in order to treat headaches properly to understand the causes which produce the affection" says Dr. J. W. Ray of Blockton, Ala. Continuing, he says: "Physicians cannot even begin the treatment of a disease without knowing what causes give rise to it, and we must remember that headache is to be treated according to the same rule. We must not only be particular to give a remedy intended to counteract the causes which produce the headaches, but we must also give a remedy to relieve the pain until the cause of trouble has been removed. To answer this purpose Anti-kamnia Tablets will be found a most convenient and satisfactory remedy. Take let every one, two or three hours gives comfort and rest in the most severe cases of headaches, neuralgia and particularly the headaches of women.

When we have a patient subject to regular attacks of sick headache, we should caution him to keep his bowels regular, for which nothing is better than "Ariolds," and when he feels the least sign of an oncoming attack, he should take two A-K Tablets. Such patients should always be instructed to carry a few Anti-kamnia Tablets, so as to have them ready for instant use. These tablets are prompt in action, and can be depended on to produce relief in a very few minutes. Ask for A-K Tablets.

Anti-kamnia Tablets can be obtained at all druggists.

LEFT WING OF ALLIES EXTENDS TO THE SEA

The Hawke was commanded by Captain Williams. It was this warship which was in collision with the White Star liner Olympic in the English channel in September, 1911. The Theseus is commanded by Captain Edwards.

Three officers and fifty of the crew of the Hawke have been brought ashore.

The latest naval loss has brought about a feeling of gloom, for it is felt now that none of the big warships of England is safe from the deadly submarines of Germany.

In the fighting of the past week the allies are said to have The great Franco-Belgian battle line now extends from the Vosges Mountains to the sea.

The French official report, issued at 3 p. m. today, says that fighting is in progress between the allies and the Germans on a line extending from Ypres, in northwestern Belgium, to the coast.

Thus it appears that the efforts of the great contending armies to outflank each other have come to naught, and that frontal attacks must now determine the issue of the conflict.

A London news agency dispatch from Paris says that the French are pressing toward Metz from two directions and that they hope to lay siege to the city within a week. It is stated that the French forces are now only about twelve miles from the Lorraine stronghold.

An unofficial Paris dispatch says that the Germans are being hurled back with severe losses in the Vosges Mountains.

The Germans, pressing toward the Belgian coast, are reported to have already occupied Blankenberghe, a town on the ocean a dozen miles northeast of Ostend.

taken nearly 50,000 German prisoners. They have taken the offensive, Paris asserts, all along the great battle line, which now is nearly 500 miles long, except at the centre, where the German lines are too strong to be taken by storm.

The Austro-German army, which is moving against the Russian grand army in Poland, consists of four mighty columns of nearly 1,000,000 men, according to a Petrograd dispatch to the Paris Matin.

The first column is moving by the way of Lodz against Warsaw, the second toward Sandomir, the third against Ivangorod and the fourth (made up of Austrian troops) along the Vistula. There are twenty German army corps and eight Austrian army corps in the advancing host. Against these forces more than 1,000,000 Russians are under arms.

Petrograd today officially reports that the Germans have been checked in their advance on Warsaw, and that the campaign against the Austrians in Galicia and the efforts to take the Austrian stronghold of Przemysl are meeting with continued success. The Germans, it is claimed, have been driven back thirty miles from Warsaw. Severe fighting is still going on, the report says, with the advantage in favor of the Russians.

Today's official report from Berlin, on the other hand, says that the Germans have an army of eight corps before Warsaw, and that the Russian attack has been repulsed with heavy losses.

Madrid dispatches say that there is a general exodus of Germans from Portugal to Spain, which tends to confirm the reports that Portugal is preparing to enter the war as an ally of England. Yesterday's cables announced that a partial mobilization of Portugal's troops was proceeding.

Secret arrests of Boers and others suspected of having anti-British sympathies continue in South Africa. Premier Botha reports that all vestiges of rebellion are being stamped out and that the army is loyal. Cape Town dispatches say that the first encounter between the rebellious Boers and the loyalists has resulted in a victory for the latter. A force of South African native troops under the command of Colonel Britss, sent against the rebels, defeated a band of them and took seventy prisoners.

Stir Over Italian Exclusion in Trieste

ROME, Oct. 16.—A measure reported to have been adopted by Prince Hohenlohe, the Governor of Trieste, ordered the expulsion of all Italian subjects working in the Austrian dockyards as a consequence of the fire at the Monfalcone dockyard, is causing great ferment here. The Messagero protests against it as an act of hostility to Italians, who, it says, are thus considered responsible for the fire which greatly damaged a number of Austrian warships.

The refugees will thus be able to return to the homes from which they fled in terror. All available coaches will be put into service at once, and it is expected that most of the refugees will return within ten days. All the deserted homes in Antwerp are being guarded by German patrols to prevent any attempt to loot.

Germans Assist Belgian Refugees

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Oct. 16.—Germany has extended a helping hand to the Belgians who fled from Antwerp and other points in Northern Belgium to Holland. The operation of trains between Antwerp and Rosendaal has been ordered resumed.

GERMANS BLAME ENGLAND FOR DEVASTATION OF BELGIAN

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A Central News dispatch from Berlin by way of Copenhagen says:

"The country is in great tension awaiting further advance of the German troops toward Ostend. Many believe that the city cannot be taken without heavy fighting, but others think that the Germans could occupy it without firing a shot. Several Berlin reports agree that the general feeling of the public toward Belgium is changing from hatred to pity. The blame for the ruinated of the country is being put on Great Britain."

Von Radowitz' Son Captured by French

PARIS, Oct. 16.—A press dispatch to Le Figaro from the front says that Captain von Radowitz, a son of the former German Ambassador to Spain, has been captured by French cuirassiers.

SEES STRANGE EFFECT OF WAR ON PROFESSORS

In a comment which made present took as a gentle fling at Professor Munsterberg of Harvard, just now in the limelight and his war utterances, John Cowper Powrys of Cambridge, England, at the City Club, called attention to the psychological effect of the war upon concentrants and professors. "It is an extremely suggestive fact," said he, "that in a crisis of this kind the intellectual detachment of educated men collapses entirely. There is something in the blood that carries away even a professor."

"It must be understood above all other things that this war is a matter of ideas. It will have extraordinary results in the liberalization of Russia and in a Slavonic wave of influence coming from the East to the West. I am inclined to regard this as a good thing for the world at large."

Edwin D. Mead declared: "The moment this war is over you will see in Germany, led by the Socialist Democratic party, re-enforced by the liberal forces of all other parties, such a campaign against European militarism as Germany has never seen. This must be the last war, was the word I heard from all of them. But the Germans will all stand together so long as they believe their country is in danger."

G. J. Arakelyan said he saw men digging trenches in Edinboro in preparation for the coming of the enemy.

PANKHURST GIRL DEFENDS MRS. WAGNER

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Miss Christabel Pankhurst, the English militant suffragist, took sides with Mrs. Lora Wagner, the Staten Island militant teacher mother, in an interview in which she pronounced the policy of the Board of Education reactionary and medieval.

"It is against the interests of the nation to prevent the birth of good citizens," said Miss Pankhurst at the Political Equality League, where she has been given temporary headquarters in Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's old suffrage lunch room.

"It seems to me to be very inconsistent to give such leave of absence to go away to fight for their country, and to refuse women leave of absence to bear children for their country. That is just the man's point of view. We will change all that when we get the vote.

"As for the possible injury to the children if their mothers have any other interests in life except them, my opinion is that children are often more devoted to such a mother. They are a great inspiration to their children."

A drawing room mass meeting will be held next Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Joseph Wise, to help along the fight of teacher-mothers to retain positions in the Department of Education. This meeting will be addressed by Mrs. Lora M. Wagner on the latest married teacher to oppose actively the wishes of the Board of Education in the teacher-mother controversy.

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Here is what Dr. Jenkin Lloyd Jones says about pigs and babies:

"The pig is raised wholly for its food supplying value; the child is a drain upon the food supply.

"Thousands upon thousands of babies in Chicago today are subjected to conditions to which no thrifty, self-respecting farmer would subject his pigs."

The women will give daily lectures and practical demonstrations of cooked and uncooked cheese dishes under the auspices of the Clean Food Club.

Speeder Had 600 Nickels for Fine, But Wrote Check

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16. — E. H. Wilhite, appeared before Police Judge McDonald in Pasadena to pay a fine of $20 for alleged speeding. He approached the judge's bench with his coat pockets bulging and weighed down almost to the ripping point with nickels.

"Look here, Mr. Wilhite," interposed Judge McDonald, "you can't be here counting nickels all day. The wheels of justice have got to move."

Wilhite pocketed the nickels and wrote a check instead.

Harvard Faculty May Act On Munsterberg's Resignation at Meeting Next Week.

too good a joker to be locked in prison for long.

HAS WIENER $10,000,000?

The Kopanek affair was the greatest joke the German army ever knew, and the Empire rang with laughter from Metz to Koenigsberg.

Is it possible that Major Clarence Wiener, with his ten million dollar threat against Harvard, is perpetrating the champion hoax of the European war upon Fair Harvard?

Has Major Wiener $10,000,000 anybow? Consider what has occurred.

A Boston newspaper receives a letter from Major Clarence Wiener of England, a Harvard graduate, who writes that he will leave Harvard $10,000,000 on condition that Professor Hugo Munsterberg be dismissed. Major Wiener writes that he desires the professor discharged for "unwarranted pro-German utterances."

Professor Munsterberg, one of the leading savants of the age, is bombarded with interviews. He becomes the "Ten million dollar Professor."

The question is immediately raised: "Will Harvard weigh the distinguished professor against the Wiener wealth?

Professor Munsterberg tenders his resignation to President Lowell and the Harvard faculty. The situation engages the attention of the entire country, at least of the academic portion of it.

Indignant graduates write letters and give interviews, protesting that Harvard University is not to be bought or bullied into keeping or dismissing Professor Munsterberg.

LOWELL IS SILENT.

President Lowell maintains discreet silence. The faculty is to meet next week and the president refuses to anticipate the action of the official body upon the professor's resignation.

The situation is heavy with serious interest, with questions of collegiate duty and the right of free speech among pedagogues.

Has Major Clarence Wiener stirred up all this rumpus for a just, imposing upon the world of letters just as Cobbler Kopanek did upon the military world of Germany?

Is the Major a ten-millionaire, or a one-millionaire, or a fraction of a millionaire?

Attorney Albert Propper, who knew Weiner in Philadelphia, is quoted in the AMERICAN as saying: "I know Weiner has no millions to leave."

Dispatches from Philadelphia quote J. L. Ketterlinus of that city, uncle of Major Weiner, thus:

"That's just like Clarence, but I'm not sure that he has the $10,000,000 to leave Harvard. If he is basing his bequest upon a prospective inheritance from me, he will be disappointed. He hasn't that money that I know of. I would not swear that he has more than two cents."

When the major wrote his newspaper letter he also sent a postcard to President Lowell of Harvard, notifying him that a formal letter was on the way asking for Munsterberg's dismissal.

WHERE'S THE LETTER.

But no such following letter has been received by President Lowell to date.

Where is that letter?

Has Major Weiner ten millions, or ten cents?

Is the Major a ten-million dollar joker—another Kopanek?

"I made only offer of resignation because I did not want to stand in Harvard's way," Professor Munsterberg is quoted. "That $10,000,000 is a great deal of money, and much could be done with it by the college. It would be too bad if my presence were to cut it off from the institution.

"This claim that Harvard would be selling out for $10,000,000, which has been suggested, is absurd. Harvard is no longer in an unfavorable position. If they had tried to put me out because of the letter, that would have been another matter, but Harvard is too great an institution to be bought in such a manner.

"But now, since I have resigned, there would be no objection to the college receiving the bequest, if Major Wiener cares to do it. There would be nothing else for them to do. I feel that I have let the college out of a difficult situation by offering my resignation."

The resignation is expected to come before the Harvard corporation at its next meeting, October 26.

Whole Affair Recalls Famous Episode of the "General" Cobbler Kopanek.

course, is not "worth $18,000,000 to Harvard," or any part of that sum. He has long been regarded as a misfit in the university's faculty, and his recent extreme public utterances have only served to confirm the belief. The professor who has done as much to make psychology ridiculous as Professor William James with his pragmatism-founder learning did to make it popular is not an academic asset of any kind, but a liability. Professor Munsterberg may expect to retain his chair, but, if it is to be hoped, with chastened ideas of a college professor's activities and with a better conception of the spirit of American institutions. He will owe his retention not to his qualifications for the place but to the university's devotion to the principle of free speech."

SAY WIENER DID ECCENTRIC THINGS WHILE IN COLLEGE

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—Major Wiener is said to have done many eccentric things in college, such as driving up in a four-in-hand in the morning from his luxurious suite in Dunster Hall. One of his classmates said last night that he had heard that Wiener went to the Boer war leaving a will which mentioned two other classmates, Philip Sands, since dead, and Willis McCormick, formerly of New York, but now in Salt Lake City, for specific sums, and left the residue of his "estate" to Harvard. He is said to have gotten his title of Major in the Boer war.

CHARGED WITH 'FLIM-FLAM' ON TWO WORKMEN

In the arrest of Joseph De Fusto of Buffalo, N. Y., Captain Sullivan of the Court square station believes he has made an important arrest. He is charged with the attempted larceny of $60 from Dominic Silva of No. 23 Richmond street, North End, and of $15 from Bimonti Bastista of the same address.

On Wednesday Silva and Bastista were met by De Fusto and a companion, who said they were the employment agents for a large concern and desired to hire two trustworthy men as messengers. After the proposition was talked over, the four agreed to meet in the doorway of No. 219 Franklin street yesterday morning. Silva and Bastista were told to have $75 between them as a bond. They were to start work by delivering a package, supposed to contain $150, to the South Station.

After Silva and Bastista arrived home they saw a story in the AMERICAN how a confidence man was working the employment agencies. Before the meeting yesterday, they told their story to Captain Sullivan, who ordered them to follow the instructions which they had received from the man. Special Officer Tryggens and Patrolman Dobratz were detailed to follow and watch the proceedings, after Silva and Bastista had been given a roll of newspapers cut to the size of bills, with two real bills on the outside. They were to signal the officers by scratching their heads. When they met the prospective employers they became confused in their instructions and forgot to give the signal. A yell brought the police, however, and the arrest was made.

Temperance Car to Show Slides in Lynn

The educational motor car of the Unitarian Temperance Society, which throws its lantern slides as it moves along the streets, will operate tomorrow night in Central square, Lynn. Thrilling pictures will be shown. James McNamara, past president of the Lynn Central Labor Union; Mrs. William Tilton of the poster campaign, and Mrs. F. Harper Blaisdell will address the crowd.

MUNSTERBERG "QUOTATIONS" DIFFER WIDELY IN NEW YORK

New York newspapers derive much interest and amusement from the question of the present market quotations on Professor Hugo Munsterberg. The opinions differ as to whether the professor is or is not "Cheap at Ten Million." But everybody has an opinion.

The New York Times is quite sure that the professor is well worth the price, and that Harvard will cling to Munsterberg. The New York Sun facetiously suggests that Harvard confer the degree of D. L.—Doctor Impudentias—or Doctor of Check, on "Wiener of Waldorf." The Sun wonders whether Major Wiener is worth two cents—since he sent his remarkable communication to Harvard via postal card.

The World, however, is inclined to the belief that even if Mr. Wiener's bequest be only two cents, it should be sufficient to insure Harvard's acceptance of Professor Munsterberg's resignation. The World says the Herr Professor is a misfit.

The Times says in part:

"The report that the members of the Harvard Corporation have refused to accept the resignation of Professor Hugo Munsterberg is altogether credible. Certainly, they would not be influenced by the offer of a gift of money. . . . In American institutions of learning the spirit of academic freedom prevails."

SUN IS AMUSED.

The Sun comments:

"One year Wiener of Waldorf lay in the proud lap of Harvard. Seventeen years he lay brooding in the bosom of silence. Then, strangest of the portents, signs and wonders, he burst upon the world and thundered by postal card at Harvard Corporation doors, 'Fire Professor Munsterberg or lose $10,000,000!'

"Then the dispatches flew. Wiener of Waldorf was now a captain; now a major; by this morning he must be at least a colonel. Le Baron Russell Briggs, the dean, hid himself in the Plymouth woods a week ago and is not yet done guffawing. The president and fellows have hard work to keep that dignity of public demeanor which is imposed upon them. A little proctor in Holworthy has been taken to the Infirmary with hysterics. Even the grief caused by the casualties among the football goats has been partially assuaged. If laughter is good for the soul, Wiener of Waldorf is a blessing.

RAP MUNSTERBERG.

"Harvard has to lose the Wiener fortune of two cents or upward, but it might confer on the Captain-Major the degree of D. L. Doctor Impudentias, Doctor of Check."

The Tragic Life Story of Mildred Sullivan, "Prettiest Girl" of Aroostook County

State and county officials in Maine are still hard at work, searching for Mildred Sullivan, dead or alive.

The disappearance of the "Belle of Aroostook County" has proved to be one of the most puzzling mysteries in the history of the Pine Tree State.

Parents and townspeople generally realize that for a school girl of seventeen to disappear as swiftly and effectually as an apparition, is unusual and uncanny.

That accounts for the intense interest in the case. The AMERICAN today prints the third instalment of a narrative embracing the life of the Houlton girl and a comprehensive summary of the tragedy based on a full and painstaking investigation by a staff reporter who was on the scene a fortnight.

HELEN CARPENTER, Mildred Sullivan's sixteen-year-old aunt, who is helping trace clews in mystery.

CHAPTER THREE.

After her parents settled in Houlton several years ago, Mildred Sullivan's life broadened in proportion to the size and diversions of a thrifty border town as compared with existence on a remote plantation.

Millie's school life too was livelier. She found the classes larger. She met more boys and girls. They dressed better and so did she. Her mother made her pretty frocks and lace collars and she soon became sufficiently skilful with the needle to make many of her own clothes.

At school and at the little white meeting house, Millie was invited to attend many parties to which required "crimping up" and her associates often marvelled how fetching she looked in the simplest of frocks. Mildred was one of those fortunates who looked nice in anything. No matter what she put on or how she wore a thing it looked becoming.

She had an artistic way of dressing. As she entered her teens Millie's playmates and parents began to realize that she was developing into an unusually attractive girl.

Not that her features were more perfect than many another girl in the village, but so daintily moulded in fact, but the tint of her dark brown hair, the sparkle of her eyes and her perfect complexion more than compensated for a not too perfect nose.

Her eyes were her most striking feature. They were large and expressive, and she had a personality that gave charm to her appearance. Perhaps it was Mildred's magnetism and buoyant nature that made her conspicuous among the school girls of Houlton. Perhaps it was her bright smile and her cheerful attitude toward everyone.

Certain it is that everyone in her community speaks of her as "unusually pretty." Neighbors and casual acquaintances and storekeepers agree that Mildred was much better looking than her pictures. They say she was one of those girls whom a photograph did not do justice. Hence the general acceptance of the phrase, "the belle of Aroostook County."

Among her relatives and friends Mildred was like a ray of sunshine. They say she brightened any group. She was jolly company. She never looked on the dark side of things. Her life had been wholly foreign to the troubles and sordidness of the world. Her mother had taken good care of that. In many things things Millie had the perspective of a child. She had been reared in a wholesome atmosphere, and reflected it.

She was just a healthy, rollicking girl of seventeen when the tragedy came into her life. If her parents and aunts and cousins are to be believed Mildred was not much in the company of boys. The major part of her time was spent with her Aunt Helen, who was a year younger than herself.

She and Helen attended very few dances. They went to the "movies" together when Helen visited Houlton. The two very-up-to-date picture houses changed the films twice a week. Everybody up that way goes to the "movies," and many of them twice a week. Mildred went with her mother or her brother or aunts, and, occasionally went with school girl friends.

But from what could be learned she was not in the habit of staying out late, nor did she associate with boys and girls of wayward tendencies. She spent most of her time at home, helping her mother with the household duties, because Mrs. Sullivan had hands full getting the meals for a family of eight and mending, continually mending.

Millie was like a little mother to the younger children when mamma was away. She often acted as housekeeper. She could cook and sew like a grown woman. She was versed in all of the domestic sciences and had the most practical kind of training in them. Most girls in that country are. They are fitted as wives at sixteen and not a few step out at that age, or elope. The tendency is to marry much younger than do the young men and women in city communities.

Nor do parents object when an older man seeks to court a daughter of tender years. It is accepted as the custom, as the rule of life, and, nine times out of ten, perhaps it would be fairer to put it ninety-nine times out of a 100, the outcome is a happy marriage.

Sympathy and Not Condemnation for Girl.

"Then there are the other cases, the exceptions that have long been the bane of rural life, the Scarlet Letter victims, many of whom foolishly think that relief lies amid the loneliness and temptations and miseries of a big city, the girls about which volumes of fiction have been written from time immemorial.

Many residents of New England may already have gained a false impression of unfortunate Mildred Sullivan because of what they have read and falsely analyzed about the mystery that has engulfed and banished her as completely as if the earth had swallowed her.

No doubt many have in their thoughts blamed Mildred for the strange fate that befell her. They may think it retribution, the end of another girl gone wrong, but persons who think this way should be cautioned to reserve their opinion until they know all. When they get all the facts there is no doubt that condemnation will turn to sympathy. They will be sure to see poor Millie Sullivan in a different light.

They will discover that she was the victim of circumstance, the innocent plaything of a man who came as a lodger to her home, a man who was placed under bonds for a similar case last July. To be sure, it may be argued that Mildred, a girl of seventeen, with the use of reason should have avoided this man who was old enough to be her father and that her parents should have detected the danger in time.

All this may be true, but history has chronicled thousands of such cases, cases where the child victim had little choice and no warning, and the protectors taken unawares, and kept in the dark until overpowered by the awful reality.

Such was the experience of pretty Mildred Sullivan. Fate claimed her in her home. It stalked unknown through the portals of her parents' house. It violated the sacred precincts of a harbor of safety which above all others might be felt to be the most secure. And with its coming it trampled out forever with a relentless heel all the innocent sunshine of her life.

What's What In Men's Styles

Since we opened this Live Store, we have so consistently been first with the correct new things that some have arrived at the very natural conclusion that we are creators as well as purveyors of men's styles. But such is not the case and we lay no claim to that high honor.

All we claim for ourselves is the ability to see what's coming while it is yet afar off. And through our close relations with such leading makers as the great House of Kuppenheimer we are able to present the new ideas in a perfected state while others are just beginning to experiment with them.

Should anyone ask you for specific instances of our foresight as regards the trend of style, you may cite such instances as the so-called English models, plaid-back overcoats, club checks, pencil stripes, patch pockets more lately, Tartan Plaids, which [illegible] be found nowhere in Boston but here

Correct style ranges from conservative to extreme, but to generalize briefly:—In suit lines there's a tendency to softer effects, narrow sleeves, little or no padding in the shoulders, and broader soft-roll lapels. Vests have a deeper opening than a season ago. Trousers have moderately narrow legs. Patterns include Tartan Plaids, Glen Urquharts, checks, stripes, mixtures and solid colors, mostly in unobtrusive shades such as gentlemen usually prefer.

Motor Coats

Big, warm, double-breasted coats of windproof, rainproof Frieze, with heavy worsted body lining and rich satin yoke and sleeve lining.

Coats of Similar Style at $16.50, $22.50, $25, $30

Chuck the Old Notion that Correct Style Means High Price

Here are men's and young men's suits modelled along the latest and most approved lines. Some are conservative and some rather extreme, but the great majority strike the happy medium as regards style. The pure wool fabrics and the careful hand tailoring, however, put them far ahead of medium as regards quality. You'll find that suits as good as these are invariably priced $3 to $5 higher elsewhere.

We sell these Suits, satisfaction fully guaranteed, at $12.50 and $15

Kuppenheimer Clothes Are Famous for Their Style

The House of Kuppenheimer seems to be peculiarly gifted in its ability to produce young men's suits which typify youth, while quiet dignity and true worth are written large in the more conservative styles. The attractive appearance of Kuppenheimer Clothes is more than surface deep, fine hand tailoring making their good lines as permanent as the virgin wool fabrics from which they are made.

Her Husband's Widow

A Thrilling Story of Romance, Adventure and Intrigue, in Which a Beautiful Young Bride Plays the Part of the Heroine

that night for the pleasure of anticipation and for her delight in thinking about him. He was the very hero she had dreamed of.

Her new friend proved neither inquisitive nor communicative about himself. Luckily, they found a common topic of interest in books, though his reading appeared to be of a more serious kind than hers. Presently he displayed an intimate acquaintance with Egypt and even out-of-the-way Cyprus. Leslie was enchanted. Never before had she talked with anyone who had set foot outside of the United Kingdom.

And this man had actually trodden the sands of the desert and clambered up the Great Pyramid. He talked very well, in a graphic, impersonal way, about these strange places and peoples, illuminating his disclosures with flashes of a crude, boyish humor and considerable power of criticism.

He evinced, though she did not know it, a greater intimacy with the natives of the Levant and a better understanding of their character than most travelers attain to.

"But all these yarns must bore you," he said apologetically, breaking off in the midst of a narrative and drawing a cigarette from a little yellow packet.

He became invested in her eyes with the glamour of the wonderful lands he described. In his company she tasted a far greater happiness than she had ever known. They met every afternoon now, sometimes in the evenings also.

She was obliged to feign repeated headaches to the landlady and to hire a girl at her own expense to look after the children.

They made excursions to Battle Abbey, to Rexhill, to Winchelsea, and took long tramps to the pretty villages behind the old Cinque Ports. She noticed that he always wore the same suit and that he never recognized any one.

Then one day, the desire for closer communion overmastering her, she departed from her reserve and told him of her ambition, and her discontent with her present life. "I want the best of everything," she cried passionately, resting her pointed chin on her hand and staring out to sea.

"I don't see that life is worth living if there isn't joy and light in it. When I see the pretty women coming out of the big houses and hotels, and the lights, and the gaiety, I feel as hungry as a starving man. If I got another situation I'd only be a little better off or a little worse. I wish I could get on the stage."

"I wouldn't do that," advised Steele, looking grave.

"I don't know why you say that. I wish to heavens I had the chance. To get away from those vulgar people. Ugh! I do hate them!"

"YOU'LL MARRY A RICH MAN ONE OF THESE DAYS"

"You'll marry a rich man some day," he encouraged her, with a smile she thought a little rueful.

"No fear of that. But let's talk of pleasanter things."

She had never been the least bit in love before, so she must be excused for not knowing when a man came to her. She could hardly restrain herself from rushing to the place of meeting.

"I'm leaving Hastings next Thursday," he announced abruptly as they met in the arbor in the quiet little blending gardens.

"Next Thursday!" she gasped.

He nodded and turning saw tears in her eyes.

"Do you care much, little girl?" he asked, attempting to laugh. "Have I made things any lighter for you?"

She made a choking sound and dabbed her handkerchief to her eyes. At his lip light, hard, look on may, then turned sharply round and threw his arms about her. "I've held myself in long enough," he said almost angrily, and, clasping her to him roughly, he rained down kisses on her lips and eyes.

It was the first time a man had kissed her. Yet she had no impulse to resist. An ecstasy possessed her. He felt her lips pressed in greedy response against his own. For two minutes or more they clung to each other. Then he released her. She sank back in a corner of the arbor trembling, a flaming red spot on her pale cheek. He regarded her shamefacedly.

"I oughtn't to have done that," he muttered; "it was a low-down thing to do. But there it is!—I'm in love with you."

"I think I'm in love with you, too," she said in a low tone. "I like you to kiss me."

His eyes were troubled. "Yes, but —well, it's not quite fair to you. I shouldn't have done that unless we were engaged. And you know——"

"Oh, I know, I know!" she interrupted. "I don't expect. . . . In four days' time we shall part and never see each other again. Let's be sweethearts for that little while."

He still demurred. "It's not fair to you——"

She stopped him with a kiss. "Mother explanations! If I think it fair, who else has a right to say anything? I'm only nineteen. I need not think of marriage yet. And you are not spoiling any chances."

Men in his position, she knew, did not marry governesses, nursery or otherwise. He loved her. She was grateful for that—grateful, too, that her first lover had been so handsome and so much of a man.

He searched her face anxiously "You don't look down on me, do you?" he asked.

"Look down on you! Oh, my dear, my dear!" And she drew down his face and kissed him.

* * * * *

Three days later he found her waiting for him at the pier head.

"I'm leaving Hastings, too," she blurted out almost breathlessly. "I'm dismissed."

"Dismissed!" he echoed. Then he noticed the despair in her eyes.

SHE IS DISMISSED FROM HER POSITION

"Yes," she went on hurriedly. "It's that cad—that man who spoke to me on the front! He's Mr. Richards' cousin. Of course I didn't know. He's been spying on us, watching us, I suppose. The brute!

"Mrs. Richards came down last night. She ended this morning and recognized me, of course. Then she called me in and asked me if it was true that I had been going about with you every afternoon and if—if you had been kissing me. I—I couldn't deny it about you.

"She asked me if we were—well, what sort of understanding there was between us. Then she told me to leave the house by 5 o'clock or she would send my trunks to the station. Fancy that wretch! Oh, I could kill him!"

She clenched her fists and set her teeth. Steele checked an oath and seized her hands.

"Well, is it so serious?" he asked. "You don't like the place. You can easily get another . . . I suppose you will go home?"

"Home" she repeated derisively. "I have no home. Do you think my aunt would take me now? She'd say she would be glad of the excuse to shut the door in my face. I couldn't give a reference. Besides, I've no education."

"What do you think of doing?"

"I don't know. I shall go to London. What do girls do when they are stranded like this? I shall make a living somehow," she wound up doggedly.

"And it's I who have brought this on," he said, hitting himself with his cane viciously.

"Oh, you needn't reproach yourself. That cad would have told on me just because I snubbed him, even if I hadn't met you again." Then, with an attempt at calmness, she added: "I'm sorry that this should have happened before you left. I really am. It's a shame to bother you. You have made me very happy. We had better say goodby now, I dare say I shall manage somehow."

VICTOR RESOLVES TO STAND BY LESLIE

She smiled bravely, and looked up at him. "I'd rather you went now, and we got over it," she urged him.

"You talk silly," he broke out sharply and stripped her arm. "It's not likely I'm going to leave you in a hole like this. Look here. I'm a poor man, but I love you. That's straight."

"Go on," she said, nerving herself.

"Well," he stammered, flushing all over his fair face, "I wish I could help you some other way, but if—if I—I thought you would have me I would ask you to marry me."

"Marry you?" She had not expected him to say that.

"Yes." He turned and faced her, noting the surprise in her tone. Then he comprehended. "Good Heavens! What did you think? Oh, I see. I'm not that sort." He faced her with a defiant smile.

"You not a gentleman?" she faltered. "But I thought—I had the idea you were a squire's son, or in the army."

"I am in the army. I am a sergeant in the Twenty-fifth Lancers."

"A sergeant!" She looked at him blankly. She had allowed herself to be made love to by just a common soldier. She wondered if that other man would find this out also.

He winced at the disappointment in her voice. "That makes all the difference, doesn't it?" he said mockingly. "If I had a star on my shoulder instead of the stripes on my arm. . . . I'll have a star yet, and a cross on my breast too!" he burst out with sudden violence. "Well," looking at her, "I'm sorry to have disappointed you. I hope you don't feel disgraced because I've made love to you, never intended you to know. At any rate, you must let me help you out of this fix."

He gazed miserably at the dull grass sea. She saw the pain in his eyes, and the next instant was aware again of the beauty of his profile and the martial erectness of his form. She forgot her desperate plight, and knew only that she could not bear to lose him. She slipped her cold hand into his.

"You a snob and a fool, I know," she said in a sobbing voice, "but I do love you. Take me and marry me if you like, dear."

"Oh, to Be Twenty!"

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

"OH to be twenty!" sighs twelve. "And have a real honest Prince Charming 'stead of this one in a book, lean at MY knee, with worshipful eyes and read me 'Launcelot Du Lake' (and sometimes NOT read me 'Launcelot Du Lake'—as my sister's sweetheart does.) And she takes it all with not half the qualms and the glory that I'D feel.

"What's twelve? Nobody takes at twelve. Twelve can READ romance and splendor, but it can't have any. My sister's sweetheart pulls my curls and then forgets I'm alive. Calls me Bub, and Spider 'count of my longish legs. One day—I said, 'I wish you'd call me Gwendolin, or, any way, my own whole name—and do you like my hair done up—like this?' And he said—he said—'Bub's shorter, and more to the point; and for heaven's sake and the love of Mike and all that, are you going swimming, sister, that you've got your locks jerked up like that?'

"And then he went flying off with that funny, eager look in his eyes after my sister's done-up hair towering in the distance! WHAT'S twelve? Twelve is the uncomfortable in-between · dream when nobody stops to see whether you know anything or not—and if you do burst right out with what's on your mind (and I DO know things), they tell you not to be forward.

"Twelve is too long for short skirts and too baby for long ones. Twelve is snubbed and paid to vanish when it's in the way. Twelve has to sleep in nightgowns with buttons down the front and a high neck that scratches, and no beauty to it. Twelve has to let its nose shine, and go to bed with the evening star, and do algebra; 'stead of dulling it with powder, sitting by the fire being one 'of a brilliant company' until eleven, and doing nothing but answer love-letters that come smothered in long boxes of roses with gorgeous red ribbon wrapped 'round.

"Twelve has to pop right out with one eye shut and its heart not awake yet when it's called in the morning, and TWENTY gets to sleep an hour longer with the blinds pulled dark! What's twelve? I wish I was twenty right now!"—NELL BRINKLEY.

THE LAST SHOT

By Frederick Palmer

A Story of War and Love, Told by a World-Famed War Correspondent. The Author Is Now at the Front

"PEACE!" she hastened to say, drawing back instinctively. And then! The irony of the words in the light of her knowledge was pointed by a terrific renewal of the thunders and the flashes far up on the range, and she could not resist rejoicing in her heart.

"That's the Browns!" exclaimed Westerling in surprise.

The volume of fire increased. With the rest of the frontier in darkness, the Emgadir section was an isolated blaze. In its light she saw his features, without alarm but hardening in dogged intensity.

"They've awakened to what they have lost! They have been rushing up reserves and are making a counter-attack. We must hold what we have gained, no matter what the cost."

His last sentence was spoken over his shoulder as he started for the house.

Without changing her position, hardly turning her head, she watched until the firing began to lessen rapidly. Then she heard his step. She rose to face him, summoning back the spirit of the actress.

"This is better yet! I came to tell you that the counter-attack failed!" he said as he saw her appear from the shelter of the arbor.

She wondered if she were going to fall. But the post of the trellis was within reach. She caught hold of it to steady herself. Failed!

"The killing—it must have been terrible!" her mind at last made her exclaim to cover her tardiness of response to his mood.

"You thought of that—as you should—as I do!" he said.

He shook her hands in his, pulsing warm with the flowing red of his strength. She let them remain listlessly, as if she had not the will to take them away, the instinct of her part again dominant. To him this was another victory, and it was discovery—the discovery of melting weakness in her for the first time, which magnified his sense of masculine power. He tightened his grip slightly and she shuddered.

"You are tired!" he said, and it hurt her that he should be so considerate. The killing—to end that! It's all I want!" she breathed miserably.

"And the end is near!" he said. "Yes, now, thanks to you!"

MUST SUBMIT

Thanks to her! And she must listen and submit to his touch!

"Then engineers and material were ready to go in," he continued. "Before morning, as I had planned, we shall be so well fortified in the position that nothing can budge us. This success so strengthens my power with the staff and the Premier that I need not wait on Fabian tactics. I am supreme. I shall make the most of the demoralization of this blow to the enemy. I shall not wait on slow approaches in the hope of saving life. Tomorrow I shall attack and keep on attacking till all the main line is ours."

"Now you are playing your real part, conqueror!" she thought gladly. "Your kind of peace is the ruin of another people; the peace of a helpless enemy. That is better"—better for her conscience. Unwittingly, she allowed her hands to remain in his. In the paralysis of despair she was unconscious that she had hands. She felt that she could endure anything to retrieve the error into which she had been the means of leading the Browns. And the killings—it would not stop, she knew. No, the Browns would not yield until they were decimated.

"We have the numbers to spare. Numbers will press them—home to terms in their capital!" Westerling's voice grew husky as he pressed, and she came to soldiers who hesitated in fact of fire. "After that—after that"—the tone entered from harshness to desire, which was still the desire of possession—"the fruits of peace, a triumph that I want you to share!" He was drawing her to him. With an impulse of the force of this desire when she broke free with an abrupt, struggling gulp.

"Not that! Not that! Your work is not yet done!" she cried.

He made a move as if to persist, then he fell back with a gesture of understanding.

"Right! Hold me to it!" he exclaimed resolutely. "It is not the bargain of a woman worth while should hold a man worth while."

"Yes!" she managed to say, and turned to go in a sudden impetus of energy. And running, half stumbling, the light of the lantern bobbing and trembling weirdly, she hastened through the tunnel. Usually the time for taking the receiver down till Lanny replied was only a half minute. Now she waited what seemed many minutes without response. Had the connections been broken? To make sure that her impatience was not tricking her, she began to count off the seconds. Then she heard Lanstran's voice, broken and hoarse:

"Martel, Marix, he is dead. Partow is dead!"

PARTOW'S END

Recovering himself, Lanstron told the story of Partow's going, which was in keeping with his life and his prayers. As the doctor put it, the light of his mind burned at full voltage to the last, went out without a flicker. Through the day he had attended to the dispositions for receiving the Gray's attack, enlivening routine with a touch of humor and reflection ranging beyond the details in hand. At dusk, as before dark he had reached across the table and laid his big, soft palm on the back of Lanstron's hand. He was thinking aloud, a habit of his in Lanstron's company, when an idea recurring gratification came to him.

"My boy, it is not fatal if we lost the agency at Escalito. The defenses behind it are very strong."

"No, not fatal." Lanstron agreed. "But it's very important."

"And Westerling will think it fatal. Yes, I understand his character. Yes —yes; and if our counter-attack should fail, then also Galland's position would be secure. Hm-m-m—those whom the gods would destroy —hm-m-m. Westerling will be convinced that repeated, overwhelming attacks will gain our main line. Instead of using engineering approaches, he will throw his battalions, mass upon masses, against our works until his strength is spent. I would be hating the bull, a risk—there's no doubt of it!" exclaimed the colonel, more aloud to himself than to Fracasse, after a while.

"No wonder," replied Fracasse. Martinet though he was, he spoke in grumbling loyalty to his soldiers. "What kind of spirit is there in doing the work of navvies? Spirit! — No soldiers ever fought better — in invasion, at least. Look at our losses! Spirit! Westerling drives us in. He thinks we can climb Niagara Falls! He—"

"Stop! You are talking like an anarchist!" snapped the colonel. "How can the men have spirit when you feel that way?"

"I shall continue to obey orders and do my duty, sir!" replied Fracasse. "And they will, too, or I'll know the reason why.

"And once we have the range—yes, once we've won one vital position—the men will recover their enthusiasm and be crying: 'On to the capital!'"

"Right! We are forgetting history. We were forgetting the volatility of human nature."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The best way to cut grease in sinks

Why women should not use Lye or Potash

THERE is a much better way to cut grease in kitchen sinks than by using Lye (or Potash).

Lye (or Potash) is an exceedingly active chemical. It is very hard on the hands, drying them up and opening the skin. If a little too much is used, painful burns often result.

Furthermore, Lye eats away the metal of the kitchen-sink and the pipes.

It is much safer to use a solution of Sylpho-Nathol. Just pour one teaspoonful of Sylpho-Nathol in a quart of water; wash the sink with this solution, and the most stubborn grease is removed instantly and every atom of it carried down the drain-pipes. The pipes are purified, too, for Sylpho-Nathol is a wonderful disinfectant.

Sylpho-Nathol is also far more economical than Lye for two reasons—first, because only a small amount in a quart of water makes a strong disinfectant and germicide; and second, because it can be used for practically everything Lye can be used for, and a hundred other things besides.

For instance, it is not only used in cleaning, but for healing. It also has many toilet uses. A little book, which comes in every package, will be a revelation to most women of the many-sided usefulness of this product.

When you ask for it, be sure to get the real Sylpho-Nathol. The U. S. Public Health and Marine Hospital service has pointed out that many so-called disinfectants are so weak they are worthless. It has approved Sylpho-Nathol, which has been sold for over thirty years, and is used in the most delicate surgical operations. There is a good reason, therefore, to beware of substitutes.

LANE WILL CAUSES STATE STREET STIR

In the will of Gardiner M. Lane, Harvard graduate, member of the firm of Lee, Higginson & Co. and one of the best known financiers in the country, who died recently, is a clause so uncommon that bankers and brokers in Boston today found it an absorbing topic for discussion.

Mr. Lane made a provision that in the contingency that his sons and other near relatives did not survive him, his testator set apart a sum not to exceed $50,000 to reimburse persons who had invested money on his advice and who suffered any loss.

This was generally interpreted to mean that as a broker Mr. Lane felt that the responsibility remained with him for the success of investments which he suggested, a moral obligation never assumed in banking and brokerage circles. Likewise it showed a spirit of conscientiousness and benevolence conceded by all to be unusual and by all fully appreciated.

TOPIC OF THE STREET.

Nor did it surprise those on State Street who knew Mr. Lane, but that fact did not impair the importance of the departure, which was the most talked-of subject on the "Street" today.

And as the matter was inquired into it assumed a more personal aspect, showing the care of a financier who feared that his advice might have hurt the savings of intimate friends, most of whom could ill afford to lose. In fact, it was because these persons had asked their advice on his judgment that he did not wish to have them lose a dollar.

Among those whose investments Mr. Lane desired to protect by the $50,000 proviso are a minister, an employe and a number of others who had meagre savings. Their names were not divulged today, but the full list is included in the papers relating to the last testament of Mr. Lane.

The executors are the widow, Mrs. Emma Gildersleeve Lane, who was left the bulk of the estate, and Charles E. Cotting, one of the best-known real estate brokers in Boston and a bosom friend of the testator for years.

"Mr. Lane had in mind when he made that contingency," explained Executor Cotting today, "the interests of persons with whom he was intimately acquainted. They used come to him for his advice in investing. They had made him custodian of their savings.

A PERSONAL FEELING.

"Therefore he felt that as their friend he wished to protect them. It was a personal feeling, a matter of friendship pure and simple. They suppose he felt that their securities had lost value owing to the depressed market through no fault of his judgment, he would like to make certain they did not lose."

"A splendidly serene and courageous act" was the way a former attorney-general of Massachusetts commented upon the remarkable clause in the will was also a subject of comment among attorneys and was generally placed in positions similar to that of Mr. Lane.

The former Attorney-General said:

"This was a characteristic piece of generous and liberal-minded conduct on the part of Mr. Lane. It can hardly be too highly commended.

"I personally was almost a total stranger to Mr. Lane. But it seems to me this action on his part—and it is especially significant that he put the clause into his will—is a remarkably conscientious piece of work.

"That he inserted the clause in his will indicates the mental attitude of a man who realizes that his death will preclude the possibility of his doing himself things he might wish to do, and so he has made it possible for others to do those things.

"The incident shows how highly he must have regarded business honor, and how he felt himself morally though not legally bound.

"The significance of it to me, is his recognition of the fact that his death might end his plans, his calm contemplation of possible conditions after his death."

Used Junk to Make Bryan Plowshares

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—An aftermath of Secretary Bryan's presentation of plowshares to Washington from the battleships have joined in signing peace treaties has appeared in the form of a report circulated among administration officials here today that Secretary Garrison of the War Department several old swords has converted into the agricultural in the form of miniature plowshares. He sent them down to the naval gun factory in Washington for Secretary Daniels there. It is said that the workmen at the gun factory decided that it was a shame to waste such good steel, drew upon the yard scrap heap for old rusty and bolts with which to make the castings of the plowshares.

Mr. Fay left on the 4th of the month of September the Ford Motor Company sold and delivered 21,872 cars. This was a gain of 11,479 cars over the same month of a year ago. This fact is significant, not only because it shows that the Ford production is rapidly being increased to meet the demand, but also because it demonstrates that the Ford Company is maintaining the 200,000 car schedule necessary to give Ford purchasers between August 1st, 1914 and August 1st, 1915, a share of Ford profits.

CHILD'S TONGUE BECOMES COATED IF CONSTIPATED

When cross, feverish and sick give "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, cross, sluggish, stomach sours, then a little one becomes half sick or half-sick-feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, tongue is full of coid, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhea. Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; it never disappoints, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Eat an Apple a Day to Help Boom New England

Eat at least an apple a day and improve your health and the prosperity of New England. This is the slogan of the Apple Consumers' League of New England, which has issued a "Housekeepers' Apple Book," giving 197 apple recipes. Here are two of them:

APPLE BALLS WITH A MIXTURE OF FRUIT.

Peel large apples, with a potato scoop cut out small balls, dropping them into water with a little vinegar added to keep them white. Prepare a mixture of grapefruit pulp, pineapple and banana and put into glasses; add a few of the apple balls; pour over all the juice left from the fruit which has been boiled down with sugar; cool and serve at once or the apples may turn brown.

APPLE BALLS SERVED IN SYRUP.

Prepare the apple balls as above; prepare a rich sugar syrup; color with a little pink color paste and drop in the balls, cook slowly until the balls are softened, pile in glasses and add a little syrup to each glass. Serve cold.

WALKER URGES PROTECTION OF THE HOME

Mr. Joseph Walker had a busy day yesterday—at noon he spoke to the workers of the American Shoe Manufacturers' Company in the city, and in the evening at Hingham, Rockland and North Abington. His theme was the protection of the American home and the American worker. He said:

"Upon a good home can come only good citizens. Our industrial system today is taking not only men but women and children out of the home. The secret of this lies in low wages. Low wages for men force women out of the home. Low wages for men and women force children out of the home. The converse is also true. Child labor drives down the wages of men. Child labor and underpaid woman labor drive down man labor. Long hours, unsanitary and unsafe conditions, combined with low wages, devastate the home and destroy the very basis of good citizenship.

"The Progressive party is alive to the conditions and offers remedies. This country produces enough for the comfort and happiness of all. The real question is one of of the equitable distribution of the fruits of toil. The Progressive party stands for the protection and encouragement of industry that our people may have work and wages, but it also stands for the protection of the worker and the just participation by him in the fruits of his labor. It stands for the abolition of child labor by the nation and for the better conditions of labor, for compensation in cases of injury, for reasonable hours of labor and for a minimum wage. To crown all, the Progressive party stands for the interest of the horse and to promote the efficiency of labor, wipe the liquor traffic from the face of the earth."

Is a Powerful Influence in Blood

Works With a Definite Purpose and Is a Known Antidote.

There are some things in medicine that are certain and definite. They do the work. S. S. S. is one of these reliables and is a known antidote for all blood troubles. More than that, it is harmless, for it does not hurt the stomach, does not affect the bones and joints, nor does it alter the integrity of the nerves and spine. But it does sweep through the blood, a powerful, searching, cleansing influence, remarkable for results and tremendous relief to those who suffer the humiliation of skin eruptions.

Nearly all sickness is due to a sluggish blood. And if you let S. S. S. bathe your system with its wonderful influence your nervous troubles, your wan, weary, faded, listless, lifeless body will revive and become so rosy-cheeked with the sense of enjoyable health you will scarcely know yourself.

Try S. S. S. today. Get a bottle at any drug store. It will do you good on your feet; keep you going all day and enable you to sleep sound and restful. S. S. S. is not a "dope," not a physic, but a fine, bracing, purifying medicine for those in need of a blood builder.

It is just what you need. S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Specific Co., 60 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you are troubled with any stubborn blood disease their medical department will guide you safely to health. Write them.

BAD COLD? TAKE CASCARETS FOR BOWELS TONIGHT

No headache, constipation, bad cold or sour stomach by morning.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold, mean you have a bilious, torpid liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out, is re-absorbed or re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will have you straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.—ADVERTISEMENT.

TOMORROW IS 'WINDFALL DAY' IN CITY MARKET

Tomorrow will be "Windfall Apple Day" in the new open air municipal market. Mayor Curley has ordered that one thousand paper bags each capable of holding a peck of apples, be on hand and sell for fifteen cents a peck.

The market opened yesterday on the vacant lot at the corner of Castle street and Harrison avenue. Farmers are supposed to sell their products at the same prices charged to individual customers and jobbers at Faneuil Hall.

All purchases will be delivered free of charge by the city to any point within a radius of ten miles.

The farmers drive their wagons into the large lot and sell their goods. Inquiry Superintendent Egan of the city market department says the buying was much better than had been anticipated.
